TO OUR GUESTS

On behalf of the Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Al Gray, and the Marines of historic Marine Barracks, Washington, D. C., it is my pleasure to welcome you to the "Oldest Post of the Corps". For almost two centuries, United States Marines have assembled in the Barracks' Yard where you now sit; in some cases to the same bugle calls and commands which you will hear during the ceremony tonight.

The faces and weapons have changed many times since the first "Pass in Review" was ordered; but the pride, discipline and esprit which have animated our Corps since its founding in 1775 have not. To that tradition and to the Marines who have gone before us, we dedicate this Evening Parade.
